

I am all for the NJ "Do Not Call" law being more stringent than the Federal law. There is enough advertising between radio, internet, television and in print to support the sale of products and services. Calling someone at home or even on their cell phones is annoying and inconvenient for the consumer. The consumer should have the choice of when to shop for products or services and not have it forced upon them.